Internet Failure Across City

By Eva Chan

Jolly City had a hard day yesterday because of a sudden Internet failure. Jolly Networks announced on TV at 9 a.m. yesterday that its server facility was on fire at about 4 a.m. and its Internet service stopped as a result. The Internet service returned to normal at 11 p.m. yesterday.

Star Post started receiving calls from the readers since 7 a.m. yesterday. They said they could not use the Internet and the hotline of Jolly Networks was jammed. Jolly Networks is the only Internet service provider in Jolly City. The government wanted a formal report from Jolly Networks about this case. The users have already posted about six hundred complaints on Jolly Forum. They were angry because it could not tackle the problem or inform the public properly.

Our reporters interviewed some of the users:

‘We do over 80 percent of our business on our online shop. I believe we missed up to a hundred online orders during the Internet failure,’ Mr Wong, the owner of an online supermarket said.

‘Yesterday, I wanted to post a photo of a cake on Jolly Chat but it didn’t work. Then I saw the news on TV about what happened,’ Mrs Lau, a housewife commented. ‘I gave the app a very low rating when there was Internet connection again.’

‘Yesterday I couldn’t surf the Internet or play online games. I called my friends and the same thing happened to them. Finally, my friends and I went out to play basketball. It wasn’t too bad,’ said Bryan Yu, a 10-year-old boy.

We tried to contact Jolly Networks for comment, but they have not replied.
